

TAO TÉ TABLE

"I have always been fascinated by the master builders of Gothic cathedrals.

With only a compass, a rope and sacred geometry, they drew curves capable of lifting stone toward the sky. Every arch, every vault was calculated, never improvised. Centuries later, Art Nouveau took those same principles and set them free, turning rigorous geometry into living forms, stems, waves, bodies in motion.

The TÉ tables were born where these two worlds meet.

Carved from solid marble, they rise like totems of equilibrium, forms in quiet dialogue with gravity. Each piece is calculated, not designed. Its curves are traced with the same sacred measures the old builders used, holding tension and stillness in a single gesture. The precision of the cathedral meets the softness of nature.

The stone seems to grow upward, light and grounded at once. It does not resist gravity. It converses with it.

Balance made material."
